For the Editor

At Franklin Street?!!

GREEN?!!!!

Gawd, how bawdy! And, as if that's not bad enough, look at the section titles.

This rubbish couldn't be the YACKETY YACK (that paragon of yearbook journalism?). Could it?

I'm afraid so . . . Or perhaps you're afraid so; I've seen it enough to have developed an immunity. Besides, you paid for it and I didn't. And it's yours, not mine.

But why (the rubbish, that is, not the bastardy)?

Oh, because . . . because it's our nation's bicentennial year independence day two hundred years happy birthday usa celebration or because the year was really a dud and the yearbook could only follow suit or because the editor lost it all in the process of finding it all (probable) or because the editor never really had it in the first place and the yearbook could only follow suit (probabler) or because (probablest).

Irregardless, it is. But it is also a collection of prose, a folio of art, a gallery of photos, a book of record, a record of memories, a memory . . .

And it wouldn't have been except for the efforts of some incredibly talented and understanding friends:

Vernon Mays, George Bacso, Mark Dearmon and Dennis Moser – who wrote and/or compiled all of the copy;

John Branch, Charles Church, Thomas Cooke and John Perkins – the most talented persons to work on the book, the artists;

Tom Barnes, Steve Claris, Roy Smith and especially Kevin Ryan – the staff photographers whose consistent and prolific work often provided my sole impetus for continuing, ie. – to do them justice;

all of the photographic contributors;

Chris Christman, Sally Singleton and Steve Toben – staff members who did their share and then some;

all of the staffers – particularly Missy Kane, Ted Kyle, Joy White and Glen Macdonald – whose share was greater than most;

all of the people at Hunter – from R.A. to Roger to Booze to John to Gary;

all of the people from Stevens Studios – especially the Ollives and Walt;

all of the aides in SAFO;

G. Mac, Missy, Francie, Jan, Kiki, Mereschak, Cathy C., Leslie & Mark, Mrs. B., Ro & Jo, the Tobens, Doris and Ryke – who preserved my insanity; Beeelly Moreees, Mark, Keith, Kent, Karp, Sharon, Berson, Janet & Rich, Burwell, Beam, Frank, Trip, Sammy, Patti, Joy and George – who insured my sanity.

And I wouldn't be (not that you care; but, then again, this wasn't addressed to you) whatever is left of me a.y.y. if it was not for the tolerance of some closer-than-friends:

Glen – who rode alone to the Pacific and then returned before I was even ready to leave;

Joyce and Mark – who proved that has-beens can and always will be . . . friends;

JB – who provided a vagabond with room, board, entertainment and advice for an entire summer, with all of the patience that comes from having been crazy enough to have done it before;

Dad, Mom, Nancy, Ken and Robert – the family that verified that axiom about absence and the heart when I needed it most;

and Dennis – who edited this book twice over, once through his dedicated involvement on the staff and again through his sympathetic listening to of my numerous self-indulgent grievance sessions – his friendship, more than anything else, has made the whole mess worthwhile.

But it's over, and so am I. Perhaps now I'll find enough of my old self to repay the generosity shown to me by people to whom I was, at best, demanding and ungracious. Mostly, I'd like to bring them clear in my mind again.

"I been away a long time."

It slipped up on us without warning, fanfare, or much ado. What's that, you ask?

Friday, April 2.

No, it wasn't much of a special day, as special days go; but for some odd reason it was chosen as the day which we would cover for the entire twenty-four hour period. No simple task, for sure, but an interesting one. We've met some people and seen some things that might have otherwise gone unnoticed. Then to, what better way to catch the essence of Carolina than to show it from start to finish? Sure, some things are left out, but we tried. And damn hard, too. So, without further delay . . .

A Day In The Life

Chapel Hill Transit

H. Shepherd

It's just past midnight, and the smell of dope (or pot, for you oldsters) leads me to a room in Grimes where six guys are lighting up and listening to QDR playing the newest Led Zepplin album from start to finish. A mellow way to end the day, as it was. No one talks, they are each engrossed in reading a newsmagazine or working on the daily crossword in the DTH. Down in the lounge, three others take in the Tonight Show.

I step outside to start across campus and am stunned to see three streakers coming through Upper Quad. No, not stunned at seeing naked bodies, I just thought those things (streakers, that is) had gone out with Nixon-Agnew buttons. Oh well, a little passe, but still fun.

In front of Teague, three guys with the midnight munchies are frustrated to find that their car won't start to take them downtown. Fortunately, a push down the hill toward Avery and a pop of the clutch sends them on their way.

In Teague's basement, the quiet is broken by the soft strumming of a guitar as a student takes a few minutes reprieve from the hassles of school to relax a little before going to bed. Further upstairs, studying is still widespread in the dorm. Hair dryers are running, stereos are still blaring and the late-night TV addicts are catching the last few minutes before sign-off.

Overheard bits of conversation:

"Where is she gonna stay when she comes up?"

"She'll probably stay in the room."

K A House

"I'm free, I'll be free as a bird. I'm afraid I won't be able to control myself."

"If you get rich and famous, then you can call me 'boy.' I don't think any of us in here will ever be successful."

Outside Avery, a drunk student comes noisily in, and a greeting flows from a second floor window: "Shut the hell up out there." The answer: "Bite the bag."

In the Avery laundry room, two students discuss "Monty Python and the Holy Grail." It is 1:23 and a sign on the wall says: "The Coin-Op Must Close at 11:00."

The party at the Zeta Psi house has long since died, but a few stragglers still manage to find enough conversation to carry them into the wee hours. Or maybe they're still hoping to score.

Down in Ehringhaus, the night attendant Paul Meyers goes through his routine supervision of students entering and leaving the dorm. Since he personally knows most of the residents, ID's are required of only a choice few. A crowd comes in from the downtown bars, and then things quiet down for the night. In fact, most of the campus is quiet now. Only a few die-hards are still at the books. The libraries have closed. Most everyone is in bed.

At 2:33, junior Mike Bustle is busy at the desk of the university police working as a dispatcher. He encounters a rush of phone calls from girls wanting to be let into their dorms. Most everything else is calm, until a call comes in reporting an overflowing sewer between Alexander and Joyner dorms. Generally, said Bustle, the night runs very slowly, but "you walked in right when it hit." He said that the major problem experienced with any regularity is people peeking into girls' windows. He was calling a plumber to fix the sewer when I left.

Just after 3 o'clock and sixteen customers fill the Waffle Shoppe on Franklin Street. I stop to chat with a fellow named Warren who was coming in from seeing the "Bluegrass Experience" at the Cat's Cradle. In his last semester at Chapel Hill, Warren expressed disappointment in not having the time or opportunity to take more courses that interested him, ones which would have made him a "more rounded person." "Maybe I'll go another semester and take what I want to take," he said.

I went to bed.

Bright and early, I was awakened by the ringing of my alarm, and, as many of us often do, I went back to sleep.

Hinton Press, Mebane

K. Ryan

Soon afterward, I was again jolted by the painful ringing of my phone. The editor, "You're late," he says, reminding me that I am late to my first assignment of the real day. I include this only because oversleeping is something that we can all relate to as an integral part of life at Chapel Hill (sort of like pre-sweetened iced tea).

Nevertheless, half-dressed and half-asleep, I stumble over to Venable to track down the venerable Dr. Donald Jicha as he began his "typical" day. Arriving at his office a little before 8 a.m., I found him at his desk reviewing notes before his chemistry class at 9. His day's schedule was to include a meeting to discuss the progress of grad students and a full afternoon performing his duties as Associate Dean of the General College. I caught him at his office in South Building later in the day and was amazed by his continual cheerfulness and eagerness to assist the confused undergrad. His go-go, never-stop pace seemed impossible to realize as an actuality, but I can now testify that Donald Jicha possesses a divine power.

Anyway, back to the early morning. Time for a little breakfast to bring us away from those sleepless nights and Friday morning hangovers. What did you have for breakfast?

Answers: – 3 eggs, 2 hamburgers

– cake

– 2 bowls of Sugar Smacks

– nothing (most common answer)

Opening, Pine Room

K. Ryan

- bowl of Corn Flakes
- sandwich
- apple turnover and a Coke
- 3 Almond Joys and a grape soda

Gross, so much for breakfast. We take time to notice the weather. Real shitty. Clouds, dampness, glumsville. It's been this way all week and we're all just waiting for a little sunshine to come through for the weekend. (I mean really, the dorm beaches just won't be out on overcast days.) At the wall in front of Greenlaw, things start to pick up. Professors run to be on time to class (so they can bitch at the students for being late, right?). A few bicycles.

South Campus Loop

hazards and pleasures that they are, coast through the courtyard. And, as usual, the ever-present pack of dogs loafs around the entrance to the Pine Room. It just wouldn't be the same without them.

Classes go on uneventfully, so to liven up the copy a bit before the lunchtime madness, we found out what exciting things people had done so far or were planning to do during the day.

Answers: — cut classes

- ate chocolate chip cookies
- going to a party in Carrboro (a dubious answer)
- going home and working in the yard
- no plans
- going to the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament
- going to watch Helter Skelter tonight on TV

Outside, Hanes Hall

T. Barnes

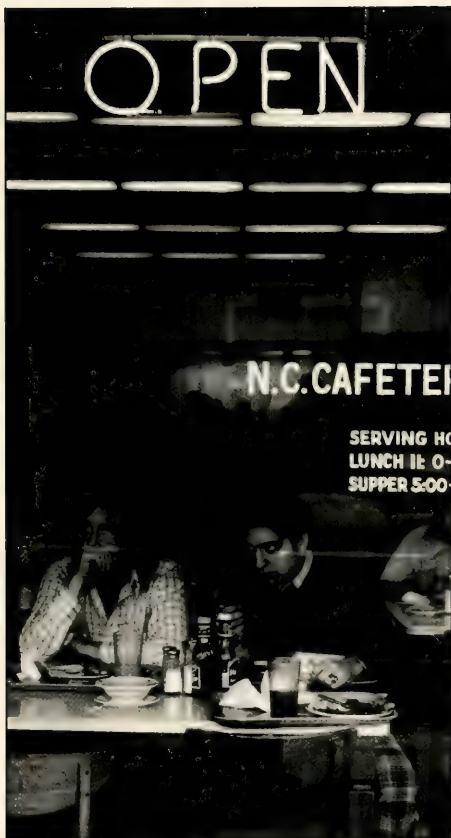

- going to the Alpha Kappa Alpha and Alpha Phi Alpha stomp show in the Great Hall
- going horseback riding - going shopping at South Square
- study (aha! an academician at last!) - having a party with 37 gallons of champagne
- dropped a course - slept through Physics 45
- got my first credit card - had a hangover
- got locked out of my room - going to a pledge formal tonight
- went bike riding - found out that my roommate slept on my bed with a girl last night
- ate rattlesnake for lunch - John Kuester opened the door for me at Pizzaville

Franz in Street

- took two aspirin - went hiking
- threw a frisbie - ate a Tarheel Burger
- going to cheerleading tryouts - got back in my dorm in the lottery
- got a haircut - ate four ice cream cones with two guys on break from Harvard
- spent three hours looking for a book at every bookstore and library and finally found it . . . in the Botany Library

Well, there you have it. Don't Chapel Hillians lead exciting lives? (I mean, could you eat a Tarheel Burger if you lived in Lizard Lick?)

Franklin Street

Lunchtime. Alas, the sun breaks through the trees on McCorkle Place and threatens to make this a pleasant day after all. (Rainy Mondays are tough enough to handle, but rainy Fridays? C'mon.) A group of junior high schoolers touring the campus aim themselves toward the Planetarium and their inevitable concert of oohs and aahs in accompaniment to the latest Planetarium feature. (Just a thought: How many of us have actually been to see a show in Morehead since we've been students at Chapel Hill? Oh well, a drawing card, I suppose.)

Spring seems to have finally hit the Hill. Blooming trees, flowers and dogwoods at McCorkle make a fitting background for the hand-holding lovers heading toward Franklin Street. Aw gosh, it's almost like in the movies. I think I better quit before I get too sentimental.

Union Square

Back in the Union, we take a stop at the Union information desk, where two-and-a-half year veteran Laura Newman is stationed. As a much-taken-advantage-of but not overly-appreciated behind-the-scenes worker, Laura has spent most of her time there today answering telephones, changing money and dispensing Union office keys. Why do such a thankless job, Laura? "Well, I like the money - I gotta have the money." Figures. But, she says, "It's a good job and interesting sometimes." Take, for example, the less-than-alert information seeker who comes to the desk to inquire how much the tickets to the free flick are. Or the 12:30 soap opera crowd. Or the lone streaker last year. And what exciting things does Laura do to keep her job the pattern of excitement we all know it to be? "Stack matches," she says. Figures.

At the Student Stores, students get more practice in Carolina's largest participation sport, The Long Line. No matter how long the week, how little the sleep, how bloodshot the eyes or how big the upcoming weekend, they all have one thing in common – that one purpose that keeps them determined not to give up the wait, to stick it out to the end, to "win" – CASH THAT CHECK! Those same eyes will also notice the small sign that bears the name Beth Dodge, the what's-her-name lady who has been feeding money into our greedy little hands for almost ten years now. Confronted by scores of students every day, Mrs. Dodge manages to offer a friendly smile to those same unnoticing eyes, and somehow we always seem to grab the green and leave without any acknowledgement. As of April 2, 1976, that smile was still there.

The scene is the Chapel of the Cross (you know, that church between Spencer dorm and the Planetarium). Inside, three students have devoted part of their Friday afternoon to something that came as somewhat of a surprise; to me at least. They are part of an Action Group involved in the Interspersy movement in Chapel Hill. Interspersy is a religiously-oriented group that is organized on a national scope. This particular group was spending its time sharing experiences with each other to give meaning to the events in their lives and to serve as a support for each other. Quotes from the Bible. Friendly atmosphere. Everyone and anyone welcome. A great way to spend your Friday afternoon. Yours, not mine. I headed downtown to talk to George.

George of George's Cheap Joint, that is. I never really bothered to ask his last name (how foolish of me), but it's not important. What better thing for a student to do to prepare for a big weekend than to stop by and see ol' George? A great guy, ol' George. In case you're not familiar with him, George runs that cute head shop that's nothing more than a closet that opens onto Franklin Street. Blink and you miss it. But it serves its purpose. And that is to serve the so-inclined clientele of Chapel Hill. Only about half of which are students, says George.

K. Ryan

"How's business today, George?"

"Doin' a little bit better than average. This will probably be the best day of the week."

"Whatcha workin' on there, George?"

"This right here is going to be a pipe. Kinda like a steamboat." George, it seems, is content to do what he is doing.

Playmakers

T. Kyle

After leaving the service, he went to school; but dropped out in favor of traveling for awhile. After working for a friend in Chapel Hill for some time, George had the opportunity to rent the small room which he uses as his place of business and so decided to open up shop and work at what he does best and enjoys most – make homemade pipes. "Pipes and paraphernalia were what I knew most about, so I said, 'Why not?' "

So how is business? "I'll be here a long time," said George. "The people of Chapel Hill have helped me out."

Oh, yes. In order to keep from creating a prejudice against George, I purposely left out one small detail (because he really is one hell of a nice guy). The detail: where he went to school before he dropped out. Well, I hesitate to actually say it, but it's over in Raleigh, you know, and it's where you have to be able to milk a cow in three minutes or less to be admitted, you know, and it's where they think rotten-tomato red is the greatest color in the world, you know, and, oh well, George, nobody's perfect.

Board of Governors

Late in the afternoon, down at the UNC Administration Building, the UNC Board of Governors adjourned, having approved the first long-range plan for academic programs and policies in the brief history of the consolidated University of North Carolina system. The five-year plan for 1976-1981 authorizes the planning of 64 new degree programs, including five at the Chapel Hill campus. It also sets re-enrollment limits for each campus and recommends a system-wide growth rate of approximately three per cent annually. UNC President William Friday lauded the plan's provisions for annual review, which insure that no school will be locked into its present academic plan for the full five years.

Do you know what that little white building is behind Woolen Gym? Well, a Friday afternoon exploration ended all doubts. The sign outside says "Sports Medicine Building," and we all know that signs don't lie, right? The usual Baltimore-Long Island accents of the lacrosse players are gone now, because a light practice preceded tonight's scrimmage and everyone has come and gone. The typical smell of Atomic Balm Cramergesic fills the training room regardless. On the exercise bicycle is an unmistakable Carolina sports personality, and, behind him on the wall is the aging Sports Illustrated cover of last year on which he appears. But nobody seems to take any more notice of Phil Ford than the other jocks sitting on the tables getting legs taped and ankles soaked. Maybe being a superstar is only a seasonal thing. Don't worry, Phil, November will be here before you know it.

Street Players

H. Shepherd

Back over on Franklin Street, the ATO's are wasting no time in putting away the afternoon's keg of beer. The bro's relax on the couches and chairs put out in the front yard and enjoy the scenery of spring as troops of sorority girls parade by on their way to the Shack.

While walking quickly down Franklin Street, I notice that the Shrunken Head has only two customers this afternoon – and about five employees. Man, something's gotta go! Also, I notice a woman sitting by the N.C. Cafeteria with legs so hairy that any guy on campus would envy them. The street is full of window shoppers and people out to enjoy the warm sun, but not much of any import is happening.

Old West

K. Ryan

Again in Upper Quad, 4 o'clock rolls around and finds many of the residents gone for the weekend. Sure, there is the usual crowd sitting in front of Grimes (John Deere hats and all), but a mad rush of suitcase-carriers earlier in the afternoon has left the Quad more or less deserted. In an hour's time, six people trudge through the Quad with laundry bags under their arms, headed for an exciting time in the Joyner basement coin-op. The familiar face of Charlie Miller, Resident Director for North Campus, coming down the sidewalk past Mangum is about as typical a sight in the Quad as anything (ranking on equal frequency with the obscenity-yelling between Manly and Grimes). Earlier in the day, Charlie had conducted the housing lottery for the North Campus dorms under his jurisdiction, and in the process, caused mixed reactions of joy and anger, depending, of course, on whether or not you got back into your old dorm. A quick wave and hello from Charlie, and he disappears into his basement hideaway. The female traffic through the Quad is a little slow this afternoon, preventing the John Deere's on the steps of Grimes from playing their usual "rating games." There are several rating systems in use at different times, one of them being the beer rating system. To wit: "It would take six beers to get me to even look at that girl." Or maybe "I'd have to drink ten beers before I could kiss that one." But, of course, if a young lady walking through the Quad thoroughly fills all the "qualifications," you'll hear the men approvingly say in unison, "No beers . . . no beers!"

Spencer

Things are a little more lively over in the Union, where the first annual Southeastern Gay Conference is being kicked-off. The conference, described by coordinator Tom Carr as "a celebration of the gay life style," focused upon furthering the gay and feminist movements. Speakers include Loretta Lottman, media director of the National Gay Task Force, and Dave Kopay, a former running back with the Washington Redskins who had recently made a public declaration of his homosexuality. He regrets the fact that "to be homosexual and an athlete is unheard of." Lottman emphasized the fact that homosexuals are "claiming the same rights as anybody else in society, and we have to keep confronting society with its inconsistencies." The conference was attended by about 200 persons from 11 Southeastern states.

Suppertime approaches and the munchies of a more natural sort begin to attack the student populace en masse. Getting ready for his suppertime crew, "Sarge" over at the Sig Ep house prepares a dinner of meat loaf and vegetables. A retired Army sergeant, "Sarge" has worked for the Sig Eps for four years now, after stints with other campus fraternities. He calls the Sig Eps "one of the best I've worked with." As for the juke box blaring away at top volume just outside his kitchen, Sarge has resigned himself to the fact that "they like to play it loud."

The perennial line in front of the Carolina Coffee Shop has become a traditional sight on Franklin Street at mealtime. Tonight is no exception. Eating in Chapel Hill presents as much room for individualism as most other things do here. Many are eating out in the local restaurants, but others choose to eat in their rooms or in their fraternity or sorority houses, or, (heaven forbid) like those poor, unsuspecting freshmen who signed up the previous summer for the "tremendous" deal offered by our friends from Servormation, in the Pine Room or Chase Cafeteria. Yes, humanitarians, people are still suffering their way through those unforgettable delicacies like Country Style Steak and Veal Parmegian (which, when I was an unsuspecting freshman, I could never tell the difference between).

Things stay pretty slow for the next few hours. The Union Snack Bar at 8 o'clock on a Friday night is far different from the hurried buzz of the daytime hours. Six people are scattered throughout the room, two of them studying and the others socializing. Occasionally, someone walks in from the library to take a break with a Coke. The annoying buzz of the fluorescent lights predominates as everyone speaks in subdued voices. A lonely jukebox waits to be played, but everyone seems too preoccupied with their own little worlds. By 8:15, only two men are left in the large room, kept company only by their imaginations.

Norman Cousins

By now, Norman Cousins is well into his speech closing the Carolina Symposium. A case of laryngitis didn't keep him from speaking to a sparse crowd of about 350 people, mostly non-students. Speaking pessimistically, Cousins re-emphasized many of the fears expressed by earlier speakers in the symposium. "We live in a single governmental community and unless it is converted into a single world community, it will become a single battlefield," he said. He stressed a need for national involvement in international affairs and warned against the trappings of isolation. "We can expect only disaster," he said, "unless a broader base is established for world security; and this can come only if men work for mankind's benefit rather than purely in national interest."

Union

T. Barnes

He's Not Here

T. Barnes

By the end of Cousin's reception at the Wesley Foundation, downtown Chapel Hill was at its peak. Take your pick: Harrison's, The Shack, Town Hall, R.W.'s, and Kirkpatrick's. The list goes on, but the point is that there is a place for everyone to go and forget the headaches of "gettin' an education." Many people stayed in their rooms to watch the concluding half of "Helter Skelter," but the end of the Charles Manson spectacular brought the TV crowd to the bars in a more-frantic-than-usual frame of mind.

Drinks lead to drunks, and Chapel Hill sure has its share by the late-night hours. Thoughts get cloudy, speech gets lazy, discretion goes down the throat with the nth beer.

Some thoughts and ideas from one Chapel Hill bar hopper:

Franklin Street Massage Parlor

C. Hewitt

- Someone plays a Merle Haggard song and one drunk, psuedo-sophisticate from a tobacco town yells threateningly, "Who played that redneck song?"
- It's hard to maintain your poise when you're leaning at a 45° angle in a sea of topsiders.
- 'Occupancy 55' the sign said. "Hell, there must be a hundred and fifty-five people in here!"
- policeman with pitcher.
- Pinball: one free game for every x number points. Pissing: one for every x number beers
- Is this the line to the bathroom? "No, they're giving out tickets to the next Beatle's concert."
- Good ol' boys in Lacoste shirts drinkin' National beer, sheddin' their pretensions one gulp at a time.

H. Shepherd

T. Barnes

— Been wondering where all those people are who skip your class? Go downtown at night to a bar.

— Using the bathroom behind the Dempsey Dumpster at Kirk's right by the police station.

I've been here a while, but the night is still young, as they always say. This has been quite a day, but really no different from most of those here in Chapel Hill. Aha! A pinball machine opens up. Great passtime. Just drop the quarter in, punch the reset button, pull back the knob, and . . . oh, shit! Sorry, but it's midnight again and this is where (technically) Friday, April 2 ends. It's always difficult to distinguish between where one day ends and the next one begins. To me, it's really still Friday night, but C.B. said to stop at midnight, so folks, that's about it.

AMERICA'S FUTURE — Beyond The Bicentennial

1976 Carolina Symposium March 16 — April 2

A friend of ours from Chapel Hill tells an interesting story of the over 200 years of American development — years ago, this continent was a huge chunk of cheddar cheese, fresh and unspoiled, soon, however, wind of this great cheese of opportunity drifted across the seas, and before long, adventuresome rats were on the eastern shore, sinking their teeth into the great cheese and nibbling away to their hearts' content. After becoming firmly entrenched on the eastern shore, they soon found that they had nibbled their way across the Great Continent. This process went on for many years until one rat sank its teeth into what he presumed was another piece of fresh cheese, but what was in reality a bit of ratty waste. You can imagine his confusion — the cheese of opportunity had been gobbled up and in its place remained the waste of what once had been such a savory cheese.

What had gone wrong?

None of the rats had thought to look into the future beyond the next tasty morsel, or past their immediate gratification. The rats had despoiled their cheese so that their future could only be lived amid the fallen pieces. With the short-sightedness of the rats in mind, we look at the prospects for American society.

Alvin Toffler

will be required to deal with more to handle. These changes will require a new future-consciousness in politics, new methods of planning and new ways of re-democratizing America.

We are approaching a political future shock. To prepare for it we must develop a system of anticipatory democracy. This development will be achieved only after a lifetime of radical revolutionary upheaval, not only concerning changes in our economic and social structure, but also in our deepest assumptions about democracy itself. We must practice this anticipatory democracy, which involves developing a new guidance system for society in which we anticipate the future before it happens.

Daniel Bell

"No kind of speculation about the future is worth a damn unless it is made within the context of history."

"Changes taking place on the international scene and in this country have created definite areas where challenges will occur and sociologists' speculations about problems arising from these challenges must be kept within a historical context. Our society has acquired communal and post-industrial characteristics, but there are no institutions to match these facets of society."

"A shift from individual to group rights has taken place, and although a communal society may create more participation by people, frustrations will also increase because there are no institutions for dealing with the new societal structure."

The Future

The purpose of the three weeks of speakers, panel discussions and exhibitions was to provoke students, faculty members and all citizens of this area to refocus their vision in this Bicentennial year from a strict past orientation and short-sighted view of our country to an exploration of the possible problems that our future poses, and of the potential solutions to these problems that we may find.

In creating this Symposium we attempted not to present any one limited image of the future. Rather, we hope that the program made apparent many of the possibilities for America's future as expressed by individuals with many different frames of reference. It is a question that cannot merely be asked for a few weeks and then discarded. If we are to have hopes of a livable and enduring society in the future, an intelligent and knowledgeable inquiry into what our actions mean for our future must always be uppermost in our minds. Otherwise, our cheese of the future will only be decay.

To look into America's prospects, to question long-range goals for our country and for the world in which our country must exist and "to instruct in reality and to plant the seeds of dreams" are among the highest goals that a university community dedicated as it is to education, to research and to public service must undertake if we are to move beyond our Bicentennial celebration into a desirable future.

There are probably three major things contributing to this present situation of closing some present residents out of housing. The policy of requiring freshmen to live on campus is one of the primary reasons. The second primary reason is so a student may live in a room where there is a reasonable amount of room for personal and support items. The third factor is that there seem to be more residents interested in returning to the residence halls.

It is incumbent upon the Housing Department to make every effort to assist in the smooth operation of the University. This cannot be achieved when procedures that allow students to miss classes for several days are in effect. We should not put students in a position where they must choose whether to attend class or to stand in line. We should be supportive of the educational process and not interfere with it.

The Housing department met with the Title IX Committee to discuss the methods of room sign-up. The committee was concerned with the fact that students who waited in line as many as 72 hours to wait in line that long these students missed what one would ask me to be valuable class instruction. Another problem is how to deal with exceptions. A third problem was that some students bulldozed their way into the front or middle of the line. The fourth problem was that some students called personnel saying they had to be this place or that for urgent personal business. Errors were made.

Then and there the staff of the department set out to work on a sign-up procedure for 1976-77 that would hopefully eliminate some of the problems. I personally met with 22 different persons or groups to discuss the strengths and weaknesses of the random selector method and the stand-in line method.

We were not aware that Title IX would have an impact on our sign-up procedures. The room sign-up plan needed to be combined with the Title IX decision. We had excellent cooperation from the Title IX Committee. While the Title IX Committee was working, the Housing Department was examining and studying input relative to the actual sign-up method.

Even after meetings with various groups and individuals, the decision to utilize the random method needed the approval and support of the dean of students. Even though it is not perfect, it is superior to any other plan we have been able to learn about. The residence director and the central office staff and I will gladly talk with any student who would like to discuss improvement in the sign-up procedure.

Football

Following the Carolina football tradition, Coach Bill Dooley's pre-season predictions cast images of a victorious season and glory for the good ol' blue and white. The clichés came forth by the dozens, and those of us gullible enough hoped for a championship once again. But it was not to be.

Loss piled upon loss, and fan sentiment dropped proportionately. But Dooley was not to be put down — the spirit that never sags, the heart that won't give up, the will that can't quit even against the worst of odds.

We started off okay. A Southern Conference team as small as William and Mary didn't seem to have much to offer in the way of competition. And they didn't. James "Boom Boom" Betterson jumped off with a 95-yard touchdown on the opening kick-off and led the way to a 33-7 win.

Our play was sloppy; their play was just worse. After the game and 95 yards of penalties against the Tar Heels, Dooley instituted what forever more will be remembered as the Dooleyism.

"We did all right, except we managed to kill ourselves with all those penalties. Offensively, it looked like Flag Day," Dooley said.

Two weeks later, Maryland unfeelingly wiped the smugness off of our faces, 34-7. Quarterback Billy Paschall completed only ten of 24 attempts and was intercepted twice.

Dooley responded with, "I've been in football long enough to accept a defeat."

Off to Columbus and #1 Ohio State the next weekend. Few of us dared to make the trip into Buckeye Country, from simple intimidation if nothing else. Those of us who did, though, couldn't have been more surprised to reach the third quarter only trailing 12-7.

Unfortunately, Archie (Heisman) Griffin and Company decided to wait out fate's little game and smothered us in the end, 32-7.

The appropriate Dooleyism: "Wasn't that the first time anyone crossed the goal line on them this year?"

Wahoo-wa. U. Va. promised to give us a good game, and they didn't lie. A seesaw battle ensued, but a game-saving goal line tackle by defensive back Ronnie Johnson caused a U. Va. fumble and allowed the Heels to come out on top, 31-28.

"I couldn't be prouder of a team than I am right now," Dooley said.

So, once again all bright-eyed, the Heels came back to Chapel Hill to face the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. (This is one we'd rather not talk about.) To make a long story short, we lost a 14-point fourth quarter lead and left the field having lost 21-14 to the disbelief of everyone.

"It was about as hard a loss as you can take. We had it won and just let it get away."

Next came the State game. (And, boy, this is really the one we don't want to discuss . . . So we won't.) Fortunately, a Dooleyism summed up the 21-20 loss perfectly.

"I know I'm going to sound like a poor loser, but I have to comment on our two-point conversion. Our pass receiver was grabbed by the defender and pulled to the ground. That's a tough way to lose."

Never in the history of UNC football had East Carolina beaten the Tar Heels, but rules (and precedents), as they say, are made to be broken. The Tar Heels lost 38-17, although ACC Player of the Year Mike Voight gained a whopping 209 yards in the game.

"I accept full responsibility for our performance. Our team didn't play well and that's no one's fault but mine. I expected us to be a little flat, but I still thought we would win. That was the worst performance by a Carolina football team since I've been here," Dooley declared.

And then came Homecoming. All the alumni. All the majesty. All the old hurrahs and celebration. And Wake Forest. And Delmar.

Well, Delmar won the Homecoming Queen contest, but the Tar Heels were not so fortunate. Wake Forest, 1-10 just one year before, scored their first touchdown on Carolina in five years . . . and their second . . . and their third. Final score: Wake 21, Carolina 9.

Choruses of "Goodbye, Dooley" were sung by the crowd.

"You have less confidence when you lose and right now I'd say our team is definitely losing confidence."

Clemson came to Chapel Hill and flaunted a huge flag of that stupid tiger paw in Kenan Stadium. What nerve, we said. We'll make catnip outta them!

Voight gained 228 yards and the Tar Heels scored 35 points, but Clemson scored 38 points.

The profound Dooleyism: "It was another tough loss."

Okay, so the die-hards headed down to New Orleans (that's in Louisiana, son) and a match with not-so-highly touted Tulane.

Again, the Tar Heels had a 14-3 lead in the fourth quarter (remember Notre Dame, anyone?), but the Green Wave managed to fight back and take the lead, 15-14.

Well, goddammit, we did it for a change. Seven seconds left on the clock and Tom Biddle had his chance to be the hero, and damned if he didn't do it. His field goal as time ran out put Carolina ahead, 17-15, and a potentially long ride home was made a lot shorter, or at least easier to take.

Reflecting on the win, Dooley said, "We were due for one of those to come our way . . . I consider Tulane one of the best defensive teams in college football."

Tulane?

And then the ol' yearly finale. Last game of the season and our neighbors from Dook. A win over the Blue Devils would have made the whole season a lot easier to swallow, but it seemed that it just wasn't in the stars for us to get that win. Or for them to either.

A last minute fumble killed our chance for the win and it ended up being one of those that nobody likes: Duke 17, UNC 17. We kept the victory bell, but we lost our string of 204 tieless games (two shy of the NCAA record).

Afterwards, Dooley said simply, "It's an empty feeling for me."

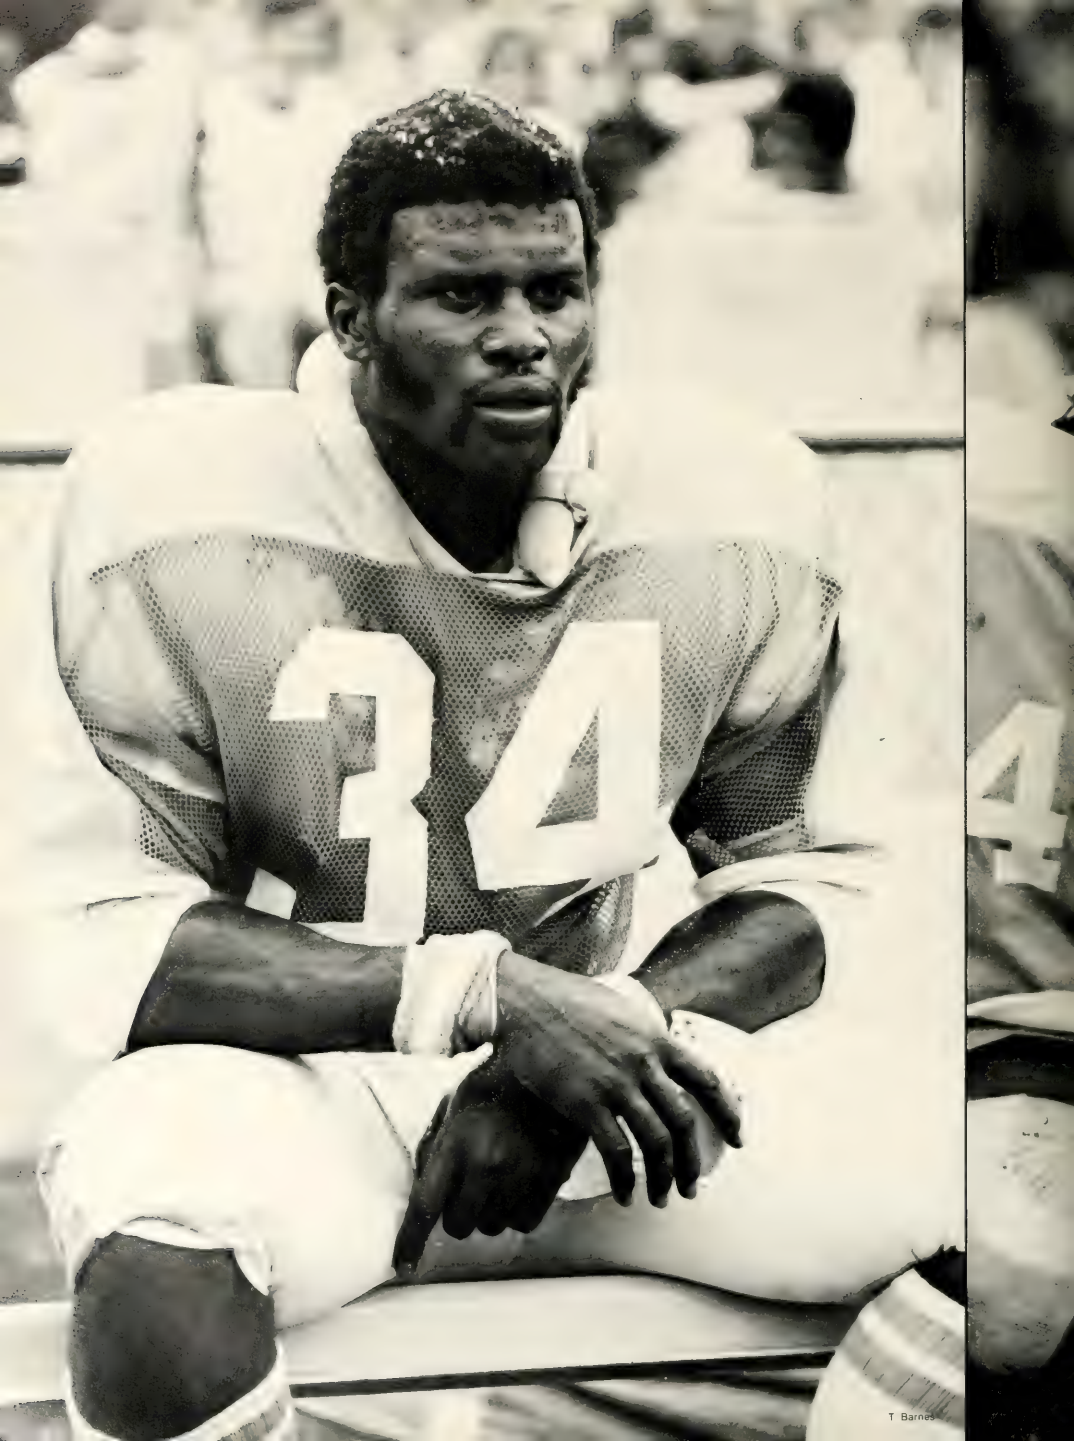

Thus ended the saga of Carolina football '75. Three wins, seven losses, one tie and a lot of excuses.

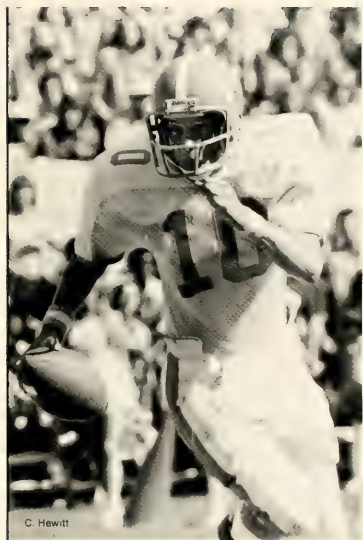

The players were saying, "Wait 'til next year." The students were saying, "Let's win some ball games or get a new coach." And Bill Dooley was saying . . .

Basketball

It happens every year and we all know it will, but for some reason it seems to be a brand new and exciting thing each time it happens — the opening of Carolina's basketball season.

The basketball Tar Heels just have that certain Carolina-blue mystique about them that no one else can approach. It can't be explained, it's just something that you catch when you come to Chapel Hill, and it never leaves you. No matter what else happens, you can always count on ol' Dean to come through with a dose of medication as we enter Blue Heaven.

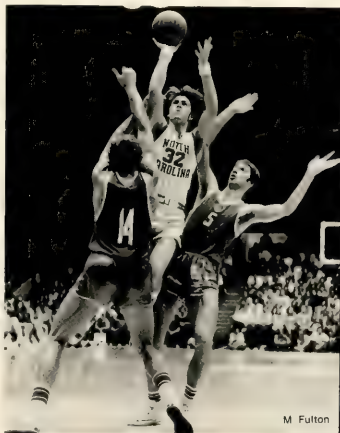

Remember the first game you ever saw in Carmichael Auditorium? Better yet, the first A.C.C. game?

Nothing compares.

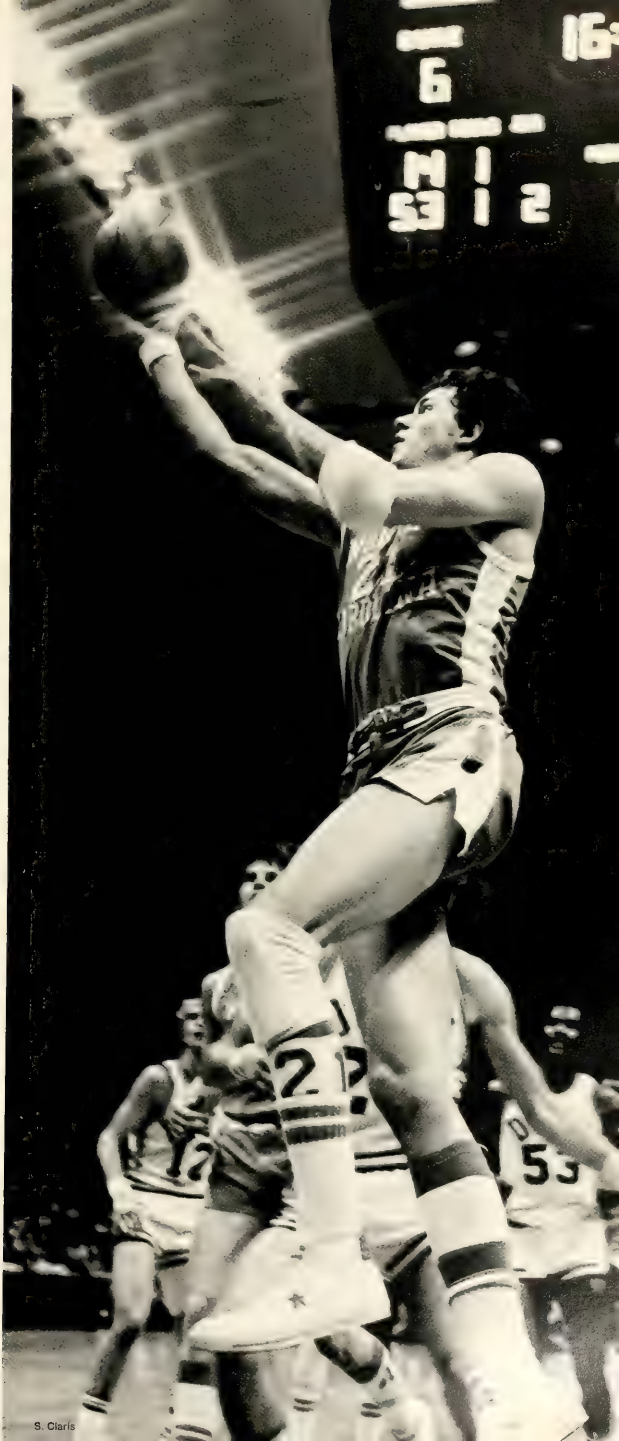

I had heard people scream in my time; but I had never heard people scream in Chapel Hill, and believe me, that's a different variety altogether.

When the team came out on the floor, the crowd shrieked, and the band blared, and the cheerleaders danced, and the next thing I knew, I was clappin' and screamin', and screamin' and clappin', and that test the next day was the farthest thing from my mind.

You see, there is just some sort of insanity that accompanies the whole basketball scene at Carolina. I mean, why else would anyone start waiting in line on Friday for a basketball ticket that wasn't going to be distributed until Sunday afternoon? (Granted, we're drunk to numbness, but freezing cold and rain are tough to take in any circumstance.) It's crazy, but it's all a part of Carolina basketball.

The 1975-76 season was no exception.

As usual, in December we warmed up on some of those "poor unfortunates" like the Soviet Union, Howard University and East Tennessee State ("Who the hell are they?"); but Christmas time came along and the Big Four Tournament presented the Tar Heels with a not-too-well accepted slap in the face — Wake Forest, that is.

Well, like I said, the slap wasn't too well accepted, and by and by, Wake's Demon Deacons came to Chapel Hill. Now, let me explain — there are wins and there are WINS, and after this WIN, the Heels were riding high atop a cloud in the A.C.C.

Four days later, it rained. Before a "national" television audience (and its right arm — the all-important and all-interrupting "national" advertiser — TV timeout, anyone?), with time expired and with the score tied, State's Al Green sunk a game-winning foul shot . . . along with all of our hopes, leaving 8,800 fans with dropped jaws, unbelieving stares and dampened spirits.

But someone, somewhere must have thought our due was due. One week later, before an official national TV audience, the Heels dramatically came from behind to upend the second-ranked Terps of Maryland. The satisfaction of watching an utterly frustrated Lefty Dreisell shake his fist helplessly at the antagonistic bleacher crowd after the game went unmatched in the students' continual conflict with the outspoken Maryland mentor.

Scores remained close, but it always turned out that when time finally ran out, UNC was on top. Two one-basket victories, two single-overtime scares and one four-overtime cardiac arrest against Tulane were part of a twelve-game winning streak. Confidence returned as we watched the rest of the I'm-better-than-you-are A.C.C. schools knock each other out of contention for the regular season title.

After the Duke game, Carolina stood at 27-2 (9-1 in the A.C.C.) and reigned as regular-season champs. It seemed we were ready to take on the world.

Next stop: Largo, Maryland.

Ah, yes, the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament, and this year it was moved up to Maryland for a change of scenery. (What excuse can Lefty make now?)

A first round bye and a second round win over Clemson put us easily into the final . . . And gawd, look who we had to play.

U.Va., it seemed, had waited until the real season came along to show what they were really made of. Without pretense and without delay, the Cavaliers handed Carolina a painful second-place finish in the tournament, sending us to the NCAA Mid-West Regional against Alabama.

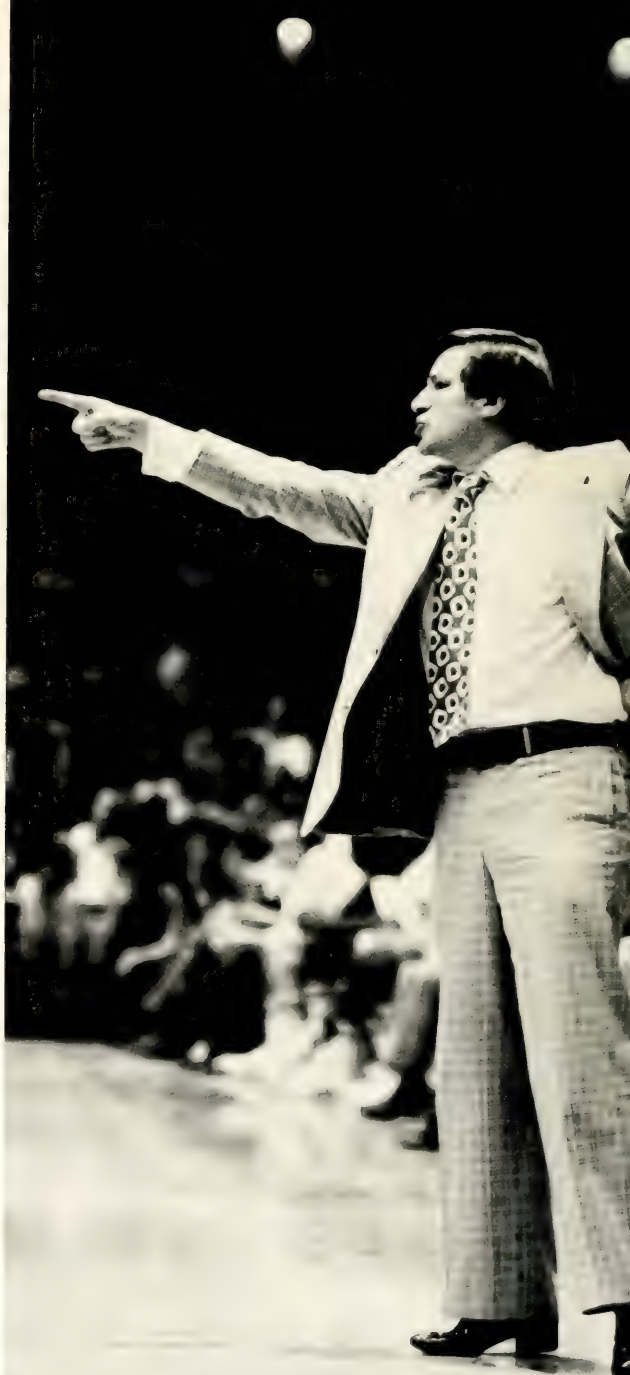

Well, some things are better left unsaid, and such is the case with the Tarheel-Tide game. Suffice it to say that we didn't win a national championship.

Yet, the season is not to be ignored. Carolina finished with a regular season A.C.C. championship, and Dean Smith compiled his best record as UNC's head coach, as well as A.C.C. Coach of the Year honors.

Mitch Kupchak and Phil Ford were both named first-team All-A.C.C. and second-team AP All-America. Kupchak was named Player of the Year in the A.C.C., and The Sporting News named Ford to its first-team All-America.

And best yet, we know there'll be more next year.

Just about two or three days after I pledged Pi Pi Pi, the (shriek!) DRKs called us up for a mixer. During rush my Tri-Pi sisters had raved about "awl the goodd frats," especially Delta Rho Kappa, that they were accustomed to mixing with, and I was pretty excited.

That afternoon I decided to treat myself to some new duds. I headed to the mall with a couple other Tri-Pi's and picked up a pair of Topsiders, some cords and a couple of crew-neck sweaters. Then we all went back to the House to think about all the bookin' we weren't doing and wash our hair a couple of times before the mixer.

... went back to the House to wash our hair a couple of times before the mixer.

The big theme of the DRK — Tri-Pi mixer was "Liquor," a rarity (so I've heard) that added even more zest to the pre-party speculations: "Oh, Lila, maybe that cute Jarvis Snodracks'll get so loaded he'll forget about that flit-brain Delta Zoo he dates and ask me out!" "Ooooo, Ah can't wait to git up with that Elliott Worth-abundle, he's suuuch a huunk!" I figured that if the DRKs were anything like their names, I could always amuse myself by counting the folks who would be knee-walkin' and toilet-huggin' by the end of the night.

So, with spirits soaring after by last (sniff) hit of Thaisstick, I donned my Topsiders and jean skirt, but in a sudden fit of daring, decided to wear a Mexican blouse instead of the turtleneck with several gold chains that my other sisters sported. Then, with a potent douse of Intimate for good measure, we all piled into cars to drive the three blocks to the DRK house.

Things were a bit uncomfortable at first when 17 of us poured in and there were only three guys hanging around. I, however, was still really buzzed, so I just floated over to the bar, ordered a screwdriver and waited for the illustrious DRK's to make an entrance.

While lingering by the bar, I was addressed by a real good-looking guy wearing a starched white Gant and bright red, finely creased pants.

"Goin' with the braless look tonight I see," he remarked. Although I was a bit taken aback, I had enough presence of mind to reply that the laundry had put too much starch in my lingerie this week and I'd had to send it back. He gave me a weird look and turned away.

I donned my Topsiders and jean skirt; but in a sudden fit of daring

Undaunted, I began to stroll from room to room to check out the rest of the material, when a cute guy tapped me on the arm and asked if I would care to get high. "You look the type," he explained. He rounded up a few of the "hard core" as he called them, and we trooped upstairs to catch a buzz.

Several screwdrivers and a couple of bhong sessions later, I was feeling less sceptical about the DRKs. Even though one of my bored sorority sisters told me she'd counted 34 alligator shirts at the party, I staunchly maintained that the DRKs had a lot of individuals worth getting to know.

... my bored sorority sister told me she'd counted 34 alligator shirts at the party.

By this time, the party was rollin', the people were rockin', and the room was reelin' (at least in my case). Suddenly a door crashed open and two loonies with a fire extinguisher started indiscriminately drenching the crowd. I was so loaded I thought it was hysterical, but I could tell some of the Tri-Pi's were nervous that their jewelry might get corroded in the deluge.

"Mack the Knife" was blaring, the din was incredible, and the DRK House so packed I could barely fight my way through the crowd to stagger back to the Tri-Pi house before I passed out.

Thank God for spring break! I knew the Carolina exodus to Ft. Lauderdale would be full of surprises, but even I was shocked to discover that the International Date Line runs horizontally — somewhere between Waycross, Ga. and Daytona Beach. What else could account for my losing two full days of my life and 100 bucks of my Dad's money in transit?

The trip was your basic pit stop every 45 minutes — the consequences of traveling with a case of Heineken.

Was it just last Friday?! Half the campus had already been “gittin’ sun” for two weeks — talk about psyched! I mean, people were really getting sick of tanning slowly in the gentle Carolina rays — can’t wait to hit those Ft. Laud beaches and get burnt to a crisp! Then the heartbreak of psoriasis to look forward to after vacation!

Since most of the Tri-Pi’s had split two days before I could leave (love those froggy professors who schedule midterms the Friday before break) I finagled a ride down with two cra-a-azy buddies of mine who just happened to have a CB radio on board for feature entertainment. I should have taken it as an omen when Leaf’s car wouldn’t start for two hours in the Goldsboro McDonald’s — a true garden spot of North Carolina. By that time, however, I had already downed a six pack, so I just vegged (as in vegetable) out in the back seat until Leaf (now covered with a Big Mac wrapper stuck on the back of his shirt) got us rolling again.

From then on, the trip was your basic pit stop every 45 minutes — the consequences of traveling with a case of Heineken . . . oh well. We revived ourselves with reef every couple of hours, saluted the fog-rise with our last joint and beer, gave false “smokey takin’ pictures” alerts on the CB and greased down once again in Kentucky Fried, before getting lost in Ft. Lauderdale. Maybe all that’s why a 16 hour trip took us 24 hours.

But then the real fun began! The Tri-Pi’s had heard about a big bash at a certain Kappa Kappa Lams on Sunday night, and burned out or not, all the best people appeared to show off the luminescent pink skins. The crowd ran the gamut — a few newsy, artsy-fartsy and jock types were lurking on the cars in the front yard, the Q T Pi’s and Kappa Diddlies appeared in little pastel sundresses to set off their burns, the Sig Manures weren’t yet asleep, though a few should have been, the DRKs and their pals, the Brooks Brothers, were out en masse, monopolizing the backgammon table. A few obnoxious DRKs, notably Audie von Beerfart, were givin’ me some grief, but on the whole it was a drunk, congenial, sunfried crowd. The place looked like a John Branch cartoon.

Ah, but the beach was the best! Nothing like the sight of some gorgeous male bods in the sun to get rid of a hangover (assisted by my a.m. joints, of course!). Somehow at the party I became entangled with the newsy and jock types. Our daily ritual entailed loading a garbage can full of beers and driving away from the fleshy hordes of the Ft. Laud strip to a semi-deserted beach — where we could chunk the frisbee, play county fair and frolic in the surf to our heart’s content. One day there even was SURF! A tall, shaggy, handsome guy from St. Royal Albert’s hall and I cavorted merrily in the waves while the rest of the light weights shivered on the beach and got ready to pack up and leave every time the sun went behind a cloud. Our little romp was more exciting than a Salem commercial!

. . . the Q T Pi’s and Kappa Diddlies appeared in little pastel sundresses to set off their sunburns.

Why did it ever have to end? Those sun-drenched days and steamy-dreamy nights at the theater, winning quinellas at Jai Alai, dinners on yachts — oh y’all we’re so young!!

Interfraternity Council

Over 20% of the campus males are now in fraternities — a significant turnaround from the trend away from fraternity life two years ago. IFC has worked diligently to promote the Greek system by placing campus-wide focus on fraternities through its Greek Week activities, which culminate in three days of formal rush. Better relations between fraternity and non-fraternity men are fostered through various all-campus dances and parties. Numerous worthwhile projects, including Community Day and the ZBT Mile-of-Pennies, are successfully carried out in the Chapel Hill area to help support local charities and non-profit organizations and to stress the Greeks' constant concern for the community. Most importantly, the IFC seeks to represent the fraternity system as not just an alternative, but rather a complementary lifestyle.

R. Smith

As coordinator and governing body of the social sororities on this campus, the 1975-76 Panhellenic Council set two important goals for the year. The first of these pertained to improving public relations and involvement with the Greek houses, with the administration, with the non-Greeks on campus and with the community. In working toward this goal, our projects included organizing a panel discussion for the Carolina Symposium, working with IFC in planning campus activities and a Greek award, promoting sorority contributions to the Community Blood Assurance Program and Walk For Humanity and participating in orientation programs.

In addition to involving public relations, the Council recognizes the sorority rush program as an integral part of our Greek system. With the number of women participating in rush and the number of women pledging sororities constantly increasing, an organized and efficient rush program was essential. This growing interest in the Greek system was partially met by the colonization of a new sorority on campus.

With the interest and participation in sororities expanding, the Panhellenic Council is working toward strengthening both the internal and external phases of the sorority system.

Alpha Chi Omega is Carolina's newest addition to the Greek system. On February 14, 1976, a specially selected group of thirty eight young women pledged themselves to sisterhood. With the support of its sister chapter at William and Mary, the sorority's national officers and many outstanding alumni, the Alpha Chi Omega colony has begun to make a name for itself on the UNC campus.

For us, the women of ACO, our goals are set high for "together we shall seek the heights."

A fraternity — a brotherhood — a family to be cherished. The brothers of Sigmnu Nu hold dear to the heart: the ideals and symbols representative of gentlemen . . . the loyalty of kinship . . . the strength and determination of thousands. A house standing tall with columns; surviving on the whole as a true family yet always having the jello for fun. It's a Great Place to be!!

Casual cook-outs in the backyard, Delta Delta Delta, a spring of countless kegs of beer, Dooley's frustrations on fall afternoons, and the Shack, oh the Shack, flood the mind to paint a fleeting portrait of a special year and time.

In the same vein, we shall fondly cherish those thoughts of the sand on the box, Tar Heel lacrosse, Cedar Rapids on Halloween night, lunch time with the Fonz, John's orange drinks and the fierce competitiveness of the Thrilla at Carmilla.

Bridge crew regulars ("need a fourth"), a flag flying full mast over a Drama 15 test, weekend trips to Morehead, a wild bon voyage at RDU, and the bungling intoxication of the kazoo band in the Bear Dook parade are all wandering parts of the harmonious whole.

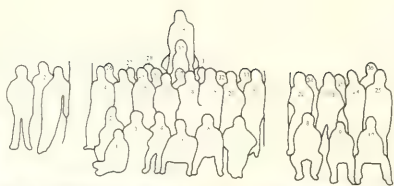

Remember the glow of the fireplace beckoning you home for the holidays, the Oxford Orphanage front-yard super bowl, court parties and the sparkle in Yates' eyes with his pledge formal date from Alabama.

Ah yes, who could forget the warmth and closeness of a gathering in the Bar & Grill, a surprise announcement of an engagement, uneventful chapter meetings, golf classics and sundae parties at the Pi house?

Recall the Thursday evening dinner visits of Dr. Reet, a crumpled pile of discarded Tar Heels, the serenity of Saturday brunch in February, and backyard ball without the big boys — color and finesse abound.

Phil Ford's "360" against Maryland, mass migration to the sunny South over spring break, and an acceptance to Harvard med were exceptional high points in a year that reached dizzying heights in insight, growth and emotion.

Capturing the total masterpiece would be impossible, almost inappropriate, but looking back evokes a tingling from deep within — looking back at a mystical place named Chapel Hill and a house on Columbia Street with memories that will last a lifetime.

Thursday night. Nine o'clock. The phone rang for the fourteenth time and finally! "Pi Pi Pi, which Pi you wanna try?" "Hey Peaches, this is Tiki — what's goin' on tonite?" "Way-ul, a few of us are goin' out for some beers about 10 — meet us at the house."

I've never been one to refuse a beer, but let me tell you I was shocked at the beer joint my sorority sisters dragged me to. Here's this dump of a bombed-out quonsett hut; smells rank; the graffiti smeared all over the walls is duller than a philosophy treatise; Fratty-baggers are packed in around the pinball machines and with one glance around, I was assured that the world wears a lacoste shirt.

But, just then that cute DRK who turned me on to some bhongs at the mixer stumbled through the door. "Oh, Tiki, there's that cute Boyd Boyd you liked so much." Great! If anybody in town had some of that dynamite Columbo I knew it would be Boyd — Thursday night might not be such a waste after all!

Boyd and I skulked off into the shadows and as we toked our second joint, Boyd's deranged sense of humor began to surface. Neither of us wanted to linger at the Chack, so he suggested a graffiti contest.

"Pi Pi Pi, which Pi you wanna try?"

He swore that guy's restroom graffiti had to be more interesting than girls'. I jumped at the challenge.

From there it was off to the Village Green to compare the handwriting on the wall. I found a great one:

*There was a young lady from Nat,
Who had triplets, Tim, Tom and Tat.
'Twas fun in the breeding
But come time for feeding
She found she had not tit for Tat.*

But Boyd topped it:

*The main problem with the real world is
That we can't drop-add.
But then,
We can take it pass/fail.*

Reality is for people who can't handle drugs.

We rushed to Harrisons, where Boyd really won out with:

*Reality is for people who can't handle drugs;
I'd give my right arm to be ambidextrous;*

and:

God is dead, but never fear — the Virgin Mary is pregnant.

signed, Joseph

I found the girls' graffiti at Harrison's rather weak, considering the "high bow" clientele they imagine they cater to. It ran on the order of:

"I'm very drunk but I know what I like — class.

Unfortunately, most of the girls' graffiti was on the level of:

*If you sprinkle when you tinkle
Be a sweetie, wipe the seatie.*

while the guys' was on a much higher plane:

*To do is to be — Descartes
To be is to do — Sartre
Do be Do be do — Sinatra*

and:

A man with a God is like a fish without a bicycle.

Well girls?

— tiki

JOHN GRIMES BRANCH . . .

For years, "Doonesbury" has been unofficially recognized as the most widely read and appreciated feature of the Daily Tar Heel. In 1975 and 1976, however, the readership dominance of the Garry Trudeau comic strip was severely challenged by the editorial cartoons of UNC Senior John Grimes Branch.

John's cartoons, which touched upon a vast spectrum of topics covering campus, state and national issues, were the highlights of many editions of the DTH.

A Chapel Hill native, John drew a few stylistically simple cartoons for the DTH during his sophomore year. But it was not until his senior year that he began to work for the paper on a regular basis.

"John is the most talented person I had occasion to work with on the Daily Tar Heel," 1975-76 DTH editor Cole C. Campbell says. "And I think he has the most potential and the brightest future."

"I think John is an excellent cartoonist and a better artist than some more well-known or widely syndicated professionals such as Oliphant," Campbell adds.

Ask John to describe himself and he will tell you about "a frustrated art major who realized he would soon be graduating and so had better start looking for a profession."

"I enjoy cartooning more and am better at it than I am at more serious art forms," Branch says. "I've always doodled and I guess I've always wanted to be a cartoonist. It's plain, simple fun." Whenever the DTH was publishing, Branch could be found at least three nights a week on the lower level of the Undergraduate Library. There he would spend an average of two or three hours working on a cartoon for the next morning's paper.

In the future, Branch hopes he will be working for a major metropolitan newspaper, where the cartooning emphasis is usually on national politics. The 1976 presidential primaries gave John some experience at taking potshots at politicians.

As primary time drew near and John readied his pen and inks, incumbent Jerry Ford and former California governor Ronald Reagan were the only Republicans to announce their candidacy. Into the Democratic ring, however, hats were being tossed almost daily, from every direction and in all shapes and sizes.

Branch
THE DAILY TAR HEEL

By February 24, ten men and one woman had announced their intentions to carry the Democratic banner in November: Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana; Senator Lloyd M. Bentsen, of Texas; Georgia Governor James Earl Carter Jr.; Senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma; former presidential candidate Henry "Scoop" Jackson; Long Island housewife Ellen McCormack; Duke President Terry Sanford; Governor Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania; former vice presidential candidate Robert Sargent Shriver; Congressman Mo Udall of Arizona and veteran campaigner George C. Wallace. Yet, the public's favorite, Senator Hubert Humphrey, had not announced his candidacy.

Few Americans were surprised when a narrow victory by Ford in New Hampshire, the first primary, was followed by big wins by the President in Massachusetts, Florida and Illinois.

Carter, who led the Democratic field in delegate-gathering in the caucus states of Iowa and Oklahoma, nevertheless stunned many when he was endorsed by popular vote in three of the first four primaries.

Ford's hopes of quickly knocking Reagan out of the Republican contest faded, however, when a victory in North Carolina put Reagan back in the running. The Reagan challenge grew even stronger when the underdog put together a string of victories in Texas, Indiana, Georgia and Alabama.

Suddenly, Ford found himself fighting to stay in the race as Reagan threatened to take Michigan, the President's home state.

Carter, meanwhile, had been slowed by a loss to Jackson in New York and a close win over Udall in Wisconsin.

But the Carter juggernaut began to roll again when the peanut farmer from Georgia captured Pennsylvania, his first victory against major opposition in a heavily populated and industrial Northern state. Then came major wins in Texas, Indiana and his home state.

While the Democratic race was becoming a runaway, the Republican contest was in a state of confusion. With his back against the wall, Ford rallied and on the same day won Michigan and Maryland by substantial margins.

Branch

Cartoon

Reagan then won primaries in Arkansas, Idaho, Nevada, Montana and South Dakota; while Ford was the victor in Oregon, Tennessee, Kentucky and Rhode Island. Pressured to carry his home state as convincingly as Ford had taken Michigan, Reagan won big in California. Ford, however, countered by capturing a vast majority of the delegates in New Jersey and Ohio as the four month primary struggle drew to a finish — ending in a dead heat.

Before the conclusion of the Democratic race, however, anti-Carter forces were revived once more. Carter suffered an embarrassing defeat in Maryland at the hands of late starter Jerry Brown, governor of California. He also lost to Idaho Senator Frank Church in Nebraska and barely beat Udall in Michigan and Connecticut.

Party leaders, not yet fond of Carter, dreamed of a split convention. There, their fantasies went, they would look to the sidelines where Humphrey, previously indecisive and afraid to risk another defeat, would be waiting anxiously for their call.

In the home stretch, Carter lost to Brown five more times and to Church three times. But by campaigning everywhere, Carter added to his already overwhelming delegate total even when he lost. Although together they had found a weakness in Carter's broadbased support, the anti-Carter liberals soon realized they had no single candidate strong enough to offer in his place.

When the primaries began, most observers predicted that Ford would coast easily to the nomination at a boring Republican convention in Kansas City, while any number of Democrats were expected to battle it out for the right to oppose him at their convention in New York.

But after 30 primaries, Ford was no closer than Reagan to the nomination, and both were forced to take part in an undignified scramble for votes among the few hundred still-uncommitted delegates.

And the Democrats, brought peacefully, if joylessly, together by a man who had purposely bypassed the old party structure, had only Carter's selection of a running mate on tap to provide excitement at their now-perfunctory gathering.

WELL, WE LOST.
SO, WORSE THINGS HAVE HAPPENED, RIGHT?
I MEAN, IT'S ONLY A GAME - YOU'VE GOTTA KEEP THINGS IN PERSPECTIVE, RIGHT?
I MEAN, YOU CAN'T ATTACH SO MUCH IMPORTANCE TO ONE LOUSY
BASKETBALL GAME - IT'S NOT THE END OF THE WORLD, RIGHT? I MEAN,
YOU GOTTA BE PHILOSOPHICAL
ABOUT THESE THINGS. I MEAN...

I HATE STATE!

The Order of Saint Andrew, founded in 1972, is an honorary for service to Henderson Residence College and its component residence halls, Alexander, Connor and Winston. Its members have exemplified the highest standards of courage, service, leadership and dedicated ideals.

The Order is based upon Scottish themes and ideas, Saint Andrew being the patron saint of that country and an important leader in the first century church. The emblem of the Order is the thistle, the great symbol of Scotland.

Order of St. Andrew

Willie P. Mangum Medal

The Willie Person Mangum Medal in Oratory, the oldest and one of the most prestigious awards given at the University, was first awarded in 1878 by the daughters of Willie P. Mangum, Class of 1815. Mangum, a U.S. senator from North Carolina for over 30 years, served as President of the Senate during the Tyler administration.

The medal is given annually by the Mangum family to the member of the graduating class giving the best oration, in the opinion of a selected group of judges, on a serious topic. Past winners include: Gov. Charles B. Aycock; Albert Coates, founder of the N.C. Institute of Government; U.S. Congressman L.H. Fountain and Dr. Frank Porter Graham.

Winner

Susan Scott – Treasurer

Phi Eta Sigma honors scholastic achievement during the freshman year. Each spring, roughly 300 freshmen become eligible for induction by attaining at least a 3.5 grade point average during their first year at the University. Recently, Phi Eta Sigma has moved beyond its honorary function into a campus service role. Last year for the first time, course descriptions written by professors in selected departments were collated, published and distributed by Phi Eta Sigma members to students at pre-registration. We hope that in coming years the project will grow into a valuable guide to undergraduate course selection.

"... It is my ardent desire to perpetuate as far as possible the great service which that institution (The University of North Carolina) has rendered to the State of North Carolina, the South and the Nation, and I can think of no better way of extending its influence and increasing its prestige than by attracting youth of the character and ability I have mentioned to become students thereof. In this way I feel I will render a service not only to the students themselves and to the University, but also to the people of the State and Nation through the accomplishments and leadership of these students . . ."

James M. Johnston Undergraduate Scholars

In 1975-1976 the James M. Johnston Awards were made for the sixth year to academically outstanding students who entered the University. Johnston Scholarships are the most prestigious which are awarded by the University among all of its scholarship programs. Competition for them is keen. This program is made possible through the generosity of The James M. Johnston Trust for Charitable and Educational Purposes, which is administered by its Trustees. The late James M. Johnston was a native of Orange County and attended the University, to which he had a loyalty throughout his life. He was an outstanding and very active member of the banking and business community of Washington, D.C.

The James M. Johnston Trustees have stipulated that academically superior young men and women be extended scholarship awards to recognize their scholarly merit and to assist them financially in achieving their educational goals. In addition to the approximately 230 Johnston Undergraduate Scholars on the Chapel Hill campus, there are about 80 Johnston Scholars at North Carolina State University and UNC-Greensboro studying in the special curricula offered there. The Johnston Awards Program is administered through the Student Aid Office at Chapel Hill under the direction of the Johnston Trustees and the University Committee on Scholarships, Awards and Student Aid. Johnston Undergraduate Awards are made to the most academically talented students who qualify for University scholarships.

Through the years, special friends of the University have established several scholarship funds to recognize the scholarly merit and to meet the financial needs of outstanding undergraduate students. The University Committee on Scholarships, Awards and Student Aid has designated several of the most valuable of these awards as being limited to those students whose academic achievements exhibit very high standards of excellence. Generally, Distinguished Scholarships are awarded to entering freshmen and continued throughout the undergraduate years. Stipends vary according to the resources of the particular scholarship, the intentions of the donor and the needs of the recipient. The Distinguished Scholarships are among the most valuable awards offered by the University. In every instance they are awarded on the basis of the outstanding scholarly achievements of the students who receive them.

All Johnston Awards are made available to students through the benefaction of the late James M. Johnston, who grew up on a farm a few miles north of Chapel Hill, attended the University of North Carolina and became a leading businessman in the District of Columbia. A special emphasis of The James M. Johnston Trust for Charitable and Educational Purposes is the education of students in the School of Nursing of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Johnston Nursing Scholars are selected jointly by the School of Nursing and the University Committee on Scholarships, Awards and Student Aid. Johnston Nursing awards are made available to undergraduate nursing students, graduate nursing students and nursing students enrolled in the Evening College. In addition, the Department of Continuing Education of the School of Nursing administers funds to practicing nurses attending special workshops and programs on the Chapel Hill campus.

Little Sisters of Minerva

The Little Sisters of Minerva are dedicated, carefully selected members of the E-bag. Our duty is to give mental, spiritual and immoral support to our S.A.E. brothers. A little sister can never give too much to her E-bag brother. The hallowed tradition of subdued celebration and intellectual interaction will undoubtedly continue throughout the years.

The Order of the Gorgon's Head Lodge was founded in 1876. Its founding fathers were seeking fellowship with others to wage war against untruth, disloyalty and the evils surrounding the myth of Medusa and Perseus. All members are sworn to eternal secrecy and dedication to the ideals of the founding fathers.

The 1976 YACKETY YACK is the 86th edition of the yearbook at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill (and Franklin Street?). It was printed 4600 times by Hunter Publishing Company in Winston-Salem, N.C. The dust cover is a 4-color, 360° photograph printed on Hammermill Homespun paper stock. The hardback cover is fern green, shoe-grained, embossed and debossed Fabrikoid with one applied color. The interior consists of 464 full-varnished 80 lb. Sterling Gloss Enamel pages with seven 4-page Homespun tip-ins – all 9 x 12 inch trim size. All of the photographs are either 35 mm or 2 1/4 format and all of the color photos are hand separated. The various typesstyles included are too numerous to name (or remember), but they may be obtained, along with any other requested information, by writing the YACKETY YACK, Carolina Union, Chapel Hill, North Carolina 27514.

"... an old Irish blessing:

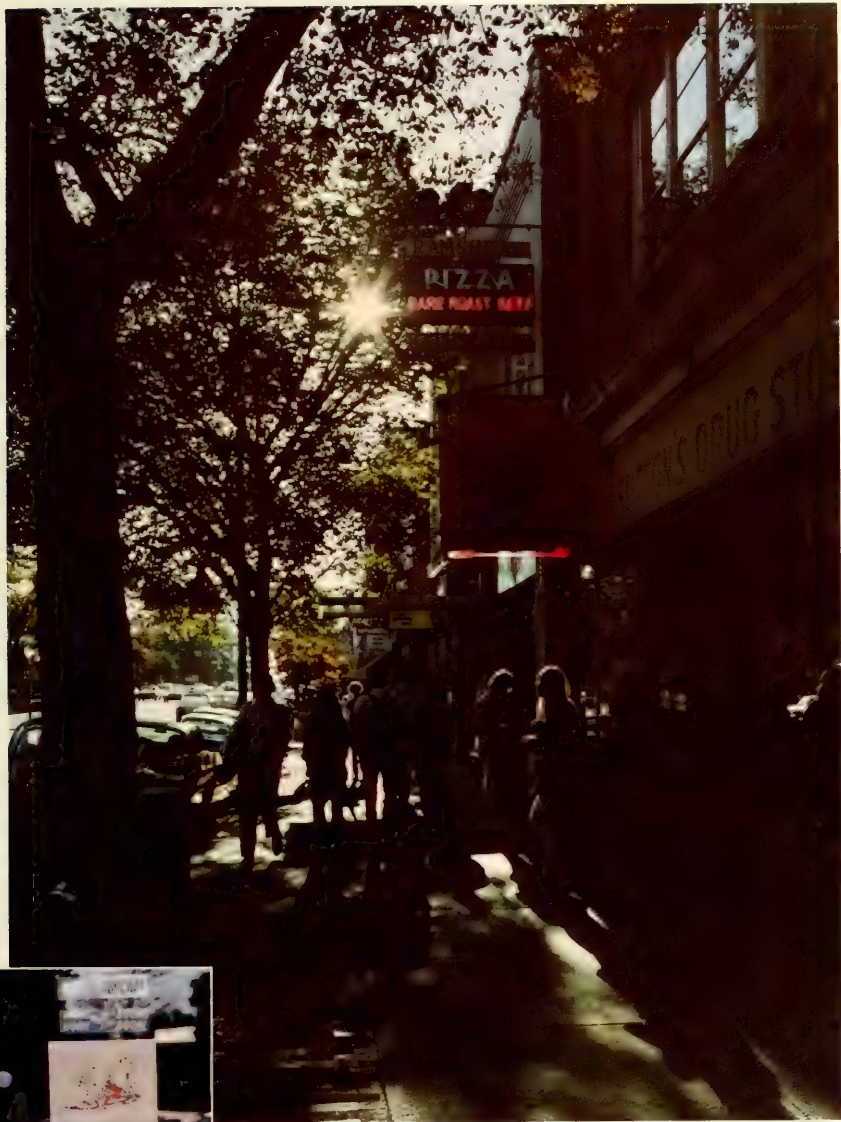

May the road rise up to meet you.
May the wind be always at your back.
May the sun shine warm upon your face,
And the rains fall soft upon your fields.
And until we meet again,

May God hold you in the palm of His hand."
